maintain forces in Germany and try cases of offenses against the Allied forces. They would also assume responsibility in the matters of German unity and a peace settlement, and, in emergencies, would be empowered to take action without consulting Federal Republic authorities. The Germans concede the general right of the Allies to a special status, but are not disposed to accept all its implications.

6. Swedish Army mission to study US training methods:

A Swedish Army mission is coming to the US to study military training methods. The US Embassy in Stockholm urges the fullest possible cooperation with the mission on the grounds that a strong and effective Swedish Army will "clearly and unequivocally" benefit the US, since its sole purpose would be to defend Sweden against a Soviet attack.

Comment: Swedish military leaders recognize that inadequate training of conscripts constitutes one of Sweden's greatest military weaknesses. There is almost no training in units above company size, and the conscription period of nine months, with a 30-day refresher course the following year, is too short. The existence of 850,000 physically-fit trained reserves supplies the basis for a sound army, provided the training program is improved and the conscription period lengthened.
